What is the MPO's Public Engagement Program?

The Boston Region Metropolitan Organization's (MPO) Public Engagement Program (PEP) is the MPO's strategy to include all people in Boston's regional transportation planning process. The program strives to ensure that all members of the public are given the opportunity to participate, including populations that have been underserved by the transportation system and lacked access to the decision-making process. The PEP guides the MPO's efforts to offer continuous and meaningful opportunities for members of the public to influence and shape transportation decision-making in the region. The PEP covers all engagement activities from MPO meetings to in-person and online forums, digital communications, and pop-up engagement events.

The Boston Region MPO firmly believes that meaningful public engagement is integral to the organization's transportation planning work. Public engagement improves decision-making by helping to illuminate the social, economic, and environmental benefits and drawbacks of transportation decisions and by supporting a continuous feedback loop in ever changing circumstances.

Who makes up the Boston Region MPO board?

The Boston Region MPO’s planning area encompasses 97 municipalities and approximately 1,360 square miles stretching from Boston to Ipswich in the north, Marshfield in the south, and to approximately Interstate 495 in the west. It is home to more than three million people and supports more than two million jobs.

The MPO board is made up of 24 state, regional, municipal, and council members who work cooperatively to make decisions about regional planning and funding priorities. Municipal representatives are elected every three years on a rolling basis. The City of Boston has two permanent seats. Along with representatives from municipalities across the region, there are five permanent seats for transportation agencies including MassDOT, MBTA, and MassPort. The Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), the MBTA Advisory Board, and the MPO’s Advisory Council also have permanent seats. Visit the Boston Region MPO website to see the most up-to-date Boston Region MPO Board list.

What is the purpose of MPOs?

Congress created MPOs to promote cooperation among state agencies, organizations, and local cities and towns that are involved in regional transportation planning. The elected MPO board is charged with deciding how to spend a portion of federal transportation money for the region on transportation studies conducted by MPO staff and construction projects. The board must also approve all federal transportation funds used in the region, which includes funding for transit, roadway, bicycle, and pedestrian projects. MPO funding is established through federal transportation legislation, the most recent of which is the Fixing America's Surface Transportation (FAST) Act of 2015.

The Boston Region MPO carries out seven core functions

- 1 Establish and manage a fair and impartial setting for effective regional decision-making in the Boston region
- 2 Evaluate potential improvements to the transportation system in the Boston region and study regionally significant transportation issues through the Unified Planning Work Program (UPWP)
- 3 Prepare and maintain a Long-Range Transportation Plan (LRTP) for the Boston region, with a minimum of a 20-year horizon that establishes the MPO's transportation vision, goal areas, and objectives; establishes investment programs; and plans major transportation investments
- 4 Develop a five-year Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) annually describing transportation projects funded in each investment program to fulfill the goals of the LRTP
- 5 Engage the public by offering all interested persons opportunities to engage in all the decision-making functions of the MPO through the Public Engagement Program (PEP)
- 6 Ensure compliance with federal and state civil rights and nondiscrimination requirements through the Transportation Equity Program, and invest in transportation projects and studies that improve access, mobility, safety, and other outcomes for underserved groups while minimizing harmful burdens
- 7 Conduct Performance-Based Planning by establishing targets and evaluating the impact of MPO actions

How can you get involved?

Attend MPO and MPO Committee meetings (in person or virtually) where you can see the process in action and provide or submit your comments

Participate in informational sessions, workshops, and forums hosted by MPO staff on MPO plans and studies

Take MPO surveys on specific projects, plans, and initiatives to shape research and policies

Join the Regional Transportation Advisory Council (Advisory Council) or other MPO working groups and task forces

Invite MPO staff to your organization's meeting or event to present MPO research and programs or listen to community members share their transportation needs

Hold the MPO accountable to develop transportation planning processes that involve everyone, including those who have been underserved and lacked access to the decision-making process

THE PUBLIC ENGAGEMENT PLAN

The MPO's Public Engagement Plan guides our efforts to make sure everyone has access to the regional transportation planning process. To read more about our guidelines, policies, and requirements read the full plan on the MPO's website at bostonmpo.org/public_involvement.

What are the MPO's public engagement principles?

The MPO strives to be open and engaging, and to work together with everyone interested in its programs. The MPO encourages public input in all aspects of its decision-making. The MPO is committed to fostering a robust and inclusive public engagement process for regional transportation planning. The following principles guide the MPO's efforts in public engagement.

Transparency: Decision-making processes are accessible, open, honest, and understandable.

Inclusion and Equity: Dialogue and decision-making processes intentionally identify, reach, and encourage participants from residents, with specific efforts made to engage people of color, people with limited English proficiency, youth, older adults, people with disabilities, and people with low-incomes using creative opportunities, tools, and technologies.

Early and continuous public involvement opportunities: Community engagement is an early and integral part of design and implementation of regional plans, policies, studies and programs.

High-quality process: Community engagement processes are well designed to appropriately fit a plan, program, or project, and adapt to changing needs.

Building relationships with diverse community members: Staff develop long-term, collaborative working relationships and learning opportunities with residents, community organizations, municipalities, and advocacy groups.

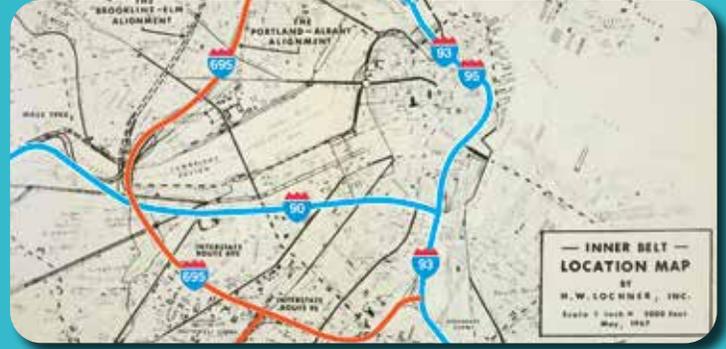

Continuous evaluation and improvement: Engagement staff continually evaluate engagement efforts through quantitative and qualitative measures to enhance the MPO's practice of public engagement and share public feedback.

Why were MPOs created?

MPOs were in a large part a reaction to the 1950s era of highway building.

Projects, such as the Inner Belt in Massachusetts, would have displaced thousands of people.

From 1950-70, the “Highway Revolts” challenged conventional highway planning.

In combination with the nation’s environmental movement, and the passage of the federal Clean Air Act, establishment of other air quality regulations, and the creation of the EPA, these advocacy efforts attracted significant political support to the highway revolts.

On November 30, 1970, not long after becoming Governor of Massachusetts, Francis Sargent declared a moratorium on highway building inside the Route 128 loop and called for a comprehensive multimodal study of the region’s transportation needs.

Through the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1973, MPOs were given the power to authorize the use of federal transportation funds.
